In spite of our best care and caution, few types of errors and omissions, in proof-reading may creep in; for which our patrons will please bear with us and any discrepancy noticed may kindly be brought to our knowledge.
The J&K State Right To Information Act, 2009 is in operation in the State for last 6 years. Prior to this Act the J&K State had introduced the concept of transparency law in 2004 by passing relevant law. The present Act is modeled on central Right to Information Act, 2005 with important provisions which makes it more stronger than the central Act.

The J&K State Information Commission has been functioning since February, 2011. From 2011 the Commission has experienced that since the introduction of RTI Act 2009 in the State, the residents of State have vigorously used this Act for getting various types of information with numerous success stories. The primary stake holders are information seekers and information givers, both are to follow a judicial process. While implementing this Act it is bound that at times there may be conflict of interests between seekers and givers of information. The Commission is saddled with the task of ironing out these conflicting interests by reconciliation and resolution of these conflicting interests in accordance with the true spirit of the Act.

In a democratic polity the legislature is the maker and creator of Law and Judiciary is to interpret Law to set at rest certain ambiguities which may arise in implementing the Law. For clarifying the ambiguities and interpreting the law, the judiciary delivers decisions/judgments which is known as precedent. Precedent is one of the primary sources of law and law develops through the decisions/judgments of the courts.

During these four years Commission has experienced that inspite of the Commission's best endeavor to introduce concerned people to relevant law and General Administration Department's best efforts to impart training to the public authorities to understand this Law, most of implementers and users of RTI Law are still treating the implementation and use of Law merely as an Administrative act and not a judicial process, hence the Commission felt a need to print the Act supplementing the same with important case law.

In this pamphlet the readers will find a number of Supreme Court landmark decisions/judgments elucidating the various provisions of transparency law. Similarly there are some High Court judgments and Commission decisions on transparency law. It has been seen that in a number of cases e.g State of U.P V/S Raj Narayan (1975), S.P Gupta V/S U01 (1982) etc. the apex court has widened the scope of transparency law and equated the Right to Information with Fundamental Rights. If the relevant portions of these judgments are carefully gone through by the implementers and users of the Act, the implementation of the Act would become more easy and in accordance with the provisions of law.

It was very difficult to scan the case law delivered during last nine years, however Mr. Paramjeet Singh, Law Officer, JKSIC has done a commendable job in accomplishment of the task. He has thus been a great help to me in brining out this compendium. The Commission hopes that this reference book if used properly will go a long way in understanding the basics of transparency law.

“Where a society has chosen to accept democracy as its creedal faith, it is elementary that the citizens ought to know what their government is doing. The citizens have a right to decide by whom and by what rules they shall be governed and they are entitled to call on those who govern on their behalf to account for their conduct. No democratic government can survive without accountability and the basic postulate of accountability is that the people should have information about the functioning of the government. It is only if people know how government is functioning that they can fulfill the role which democracy assigns to them and make democracy a really effective participatory democracy.”
